Mrs J Fenton – Library

21 October 2020

Hello everyone,

Siri in year 7 has recently won the grand prize in a national short story writing competition. The competition was organised by Hachette publishers and Blackwell's in association with children's author Piers Torday. Siri was asked to write a 1,000 word piece starting with the words "it was midnight and far beyond my window, a wolf in the darkness was calling my name." and her winning prize was some Blackwell's vouchers and a specially printed edition of her short story. Additionally, she has won £500 worth of Hachette books for Cheney Library.

We are very excited about the £500 addition to the Cheney library stock and Siri has suggested that other year 7 students might like to help choose the books (a lovely activity for a rainy half term day). If you would like to suggest a book, have a look at one of the Hachette publisher's catalogues, then complete this form

- <https://forms.gle/U4Bjx23mNnQE8Rn6> with your suggestions. We can't guarantee to be able to buy everything that is suggested but it would be fantastic to have some input from across the year group. The closing date for suggestions will be Wednesday 4th November.

As a school, we are very proud of Siri's awesome achievement and as a librarian, I am immensely grateful to her for nominating Cheney Library to receive the books.

Happy reading and choosing!
